SARENS LIFTS DUTCH HIGHWAY BRIDGE

Project cargo specialist Sarens has completed lifting operations to install an 8,400-tonne bridge in the Netherlands.

The bridge spans the A1 highway and is part of a €1 billion project to build and operate new road infrastructure between Amsterdam and Almere. The lifting operation involved positioning a section of railway bridge that measured 255 meters long, 1 meter wide and 50 meters high, and installing bridge structures for an aqueduct.

The team from Sarens relied on 244 axle lines of Kamag K2400-ST SPMTs with 122 axle lines on each side.

The bridge installation project was contracted by Dutch engineering firm Victor Buyck Steel Construction on behalf of the SAAone consortium which is completing the infrastructure development for the government of the Netherlands.
